SECOND ANNUAL MEMBER SLIDE NIGHT

8 PM Wednesday, October 6th

Idaho Falls Public Library - Large Meeting Room

It is time again to share those slides from the 1999 IAC trips we have all been enjoying so far this year. From the winter campouts to the heights of the mountaintops we have all had some epic trips.

If you don't have slides, bring your snapshots. The slide presentations will be limited to 10 minutes apiece. Get them sorted out and bring them to the meeting. A carousel type projector will be available but you'll need to provide your own tray.

President Speaks

The summer is drawing to an end and the club has had a great summer season with a full calendar of activities to choose from.

Eric and Kurt especially have had a very strong turnout for climbing and mountaineering this year, with trips to Smith Rock, Rainier, the City of Rocks, and the Cirque of the Towers in the Wind Rivers. Locally they led trips to Massacre Rocks, Snow School on Teton Pass, Mt. Moran, the Grand Teton, and many great Thursday nite climbs. Ten of us summited the Grand Teton early on Saturday morning July 31. Backpacking, day hiking, and rafting trips had strong turnouts for some trips and could have used more participation on others. Six members of the Potomac Appalachian Trail Club accompanied the IAC on our annual week long backpack trip along the Teton Crest Trail. Plans for next years trip are already being made with the PATC.

We also have several more new members from the Boise area! Mark and I will be over in the Boise area at the end of October and are looking forward to meeting up with them to discuss plans for trips with them out on the trail, rocks, or the water. If you are planning a trip over to Boise, be sure to look some of them up to meet them. A member list is finally updated with all the current members names addresses and phone numbers and is in this issue.

It is that annual time to nominate, select, or draft members to run for next years Council positions coming open. Bob, Kurt, Mark and I will complete our terms at the end of December. If you are interested in volunteering to run for council please call one of the nominating committee members: Bob Tyler, Mark Whitham, or myself.

More Club shirts are ordered and this time we ordered a few small, lots of mediums, and lots of larges. The shirts should be in time for the October meeting. Shirt info: Oxford gray Dri-Release material with an embroidered club logo. Short sleeve crew neck style. Sizes small medium, large, and X-large. The cost is $12 per shirt.

Jeff Rhoads presented his "Rhoads to Everest" slide show to us on September 1st. It was a wondrous presentation from Jeff, especially considering he had just returned to Idaho from an expedition in Pakistan the night before. October 6th will be the 2nd Annual Member Slide Nite so bring your slides and snapshots from this past year of IAC doings. December 1st Ron Waters will present a slide show on Idaho Paddling and will have his and Katharine Daly's new book Guide to Idaho Paddling available for us to buy.

Check the calendar for fall activities and see ya out there!!

Council Speaks

Date: 31 August 1999

Location: 706 Laurelwood Avenue

August note taker - Mark

Meeting of the council commenced at 8:20PM.

Read and approved last month's Council meeting minutes

Treasurers Report

General Funds - $ 3548.18

Rafting Funds - $1594.52

Number of memberships to date - 104 including charter and honorary members. We now have six members in the Boise area. Mark and Donna plan to meet with those members in late October.

Current listing of members is needed for the bulletin, the council, and local merchants - Don to email to Donna

Old Business

Club t-shirts - Motioned, seconded, and passed approval to order 48 more shirts in small, medium, and large. 8 X-large are still left.

Orienteering Class - A note has been sent to Ron Waters to see if he or ISU Outdoor Program can teach a class this fall. No response has been received. Club member Gary V. has indicated he may possibly be able to teach a class. Donna will check with Gary and will again check with Ron.

Highway clean-up project. Requires at minimum 2 times a year commitment to clean-up for a two year period. Then the agreement with the state transportation department needs to be renewed. State highway 31 milepost 6 - 8 is available. It is near the old Pine Basin ski hill. Motioned, seconded, and passed to survey club members at the General meeting to see if there is interest in supporting this endeavor. A sign up list will be at the meeting.

New Business

December - Ron Waters will present a slide show on Idaho Paddling

Day Hiking

Mark & Donna Whitham 524-6119
 Don't forget to be prepared. Bring the essentials!

End of the Season Dayhike ~ October 9

Table Mountain, located on the west slope of the Tetons, is the route. Spectacular views of the Tetons, the massive west face of the Grand, the upper reaches of Cascade Canyon, Alaska Basin, and Teton Canyon make the hike one of the most outstanding hikes in the area. Depending on who goes we will go up the ridge or the canyon. Going up the ridge is steep, but the best part is that the rest of the trip to the top of Table Mountain feels fairly flat after that first 3,360 foot climb in 1.75 miles. Be prepared for wind, cold, and the possibility of snow cover on the route. Call the Whithams to sign up to go and for the meeting place and time: 524.6119.

Trip Reports

Mt. Moran Trip Report - July 16 - 18, 1999

IAC members, Mike Wolters, Eric Peterson, Ken Hahn, Paula Simerly, Zac Hoyt, and Mark and Donna Whitham gathered at String Lake in Teton Park for the assault on Mt. Moran. Launching our assortment of canoes we paddled for the String Lake portage to Leigh Lake. As we prepared to launch, Paula and Donna both pointed out that rain was sprinkling from a sunny sky. Noting that their canoe was seeping water and the now rapidly darkening skies, Mark and Donna decided to play safe and paddle along the shore of Leigh Lake to the mouth of the stream draining Falling Ice Glacier. Everyone else opted to paddle straight across. A brief squall passed over that created choppy waves for our paddling enjoyment.

Thus, the saga began...

At the mouth of the stream draining Falling Ice Glacier, the canoes were all dragged high above the water line and turned upside down. Then our attention was turned to what the best way up the gully would be to the CMC campsite, at 10,000 feet, from the lake at 6,877 feet. It is approximately 1.25 miles to the camp. The climbers trail to the camp basically is straight up. With packs in the 65 to 75 lb. range, we began the climb. After climbing ever higher and higher, the steep grassy slope below the CMC camp came into view. Slipping and sliding across the slope to the switchbacks and then up the trail leading straight up the ridge we arrived at the camp. Tents were shoehorned into four or five manmade enclosures in the narrow stand of pines. Before we could bring water up from the boulder field near camp, lightning, thunder, and a brief downpour made us dive into our tents to await the passing of the storm. After the storm passed, we discovered another tent shoehorned into the camp and club member Sam Netuschil and his friend Kurt preparing dinner next to it. Planning to begin hiking to the beginning of the CMC route at 6AM, all of us soon went to bed.

Hiking to the beginning of the CMC route is definitely easier than hiking to the camp. Some wondering around to make our way through the cliff bands above camp, yielded a faint trail to another faint trail through loose scree to the col between the West Horn and Drizzlepuss. Kickstepping through the snow remaining on Drizzlepuss, we made it to its summit without any difficulty. On the summit of Drizzlepuss we cached ice axes and extra gear. Several members of the group noting the warm sun and blue sky decided to leave their packs and extra clothing too. After changing into rock shoes a 150 foot rappel off the top of Drizzlepuss and a traverse took us to the base of the CMC route. The rappel took some time for 9 people to complete. While waiting, we enjoyed basking in the warm sunshine and the view of the impressive CMC route.

The CMC route goes more or less 1,000 feet up the middle of the face to the left or south of the black dike on Mt. Moran. Sam, Kurt, and Zac decided to go ahead and solo climb the 5.4 route. They began quickly climbing upwards while the rest of us roped up. Ken and Paula led the first rope team, then Mike and Mark followed, with Eric and Donna bringing up the rear. The climbing was on really good rock, exposed all the way because there are not any very large ledges, but there was no shortage of good hand holds either. A series of rappel points down the face are observed while climbing the route. About 2 pitches from the top Donna noted that Mark, Mike, and Eric seemed to be kicking particles of white rock down on her. Paula thought that Ken was doing the same thing one pitch above. Ahhh, the black cloud settling onto the summit seemed to have something to do with those white particles. Donna and Paula climbed the remainder of the pitches they were on while hail pinged unmercifully off their helmets. Hoisting onto the small ledges at the top of the pitches, we donned wind gear and huddled down to wait out the hail. As the hail ceased, Mike began to lead the next pitch. Eric decided to take a look at the weather from the ridge and immediately came back saying it was time to bail. Mike reluctantly came back to the ledge while Eric began preparing a rappel. Above us, Ken and Paula had come to the same reluctant conclusion, that they were at the top of the last pitch of the day. Sam, Kurt, and Zac had summited just as the cloud settled onto the top of Mt. Moran. They agreed they were at the top and it was time to immediately start climbing down.

The series of rappel points took us down to the narrow notch between Unsoeld's Needle and Drizzlepuss. It is necessary to climb the vertical ledge west face to the summit of Drizzlepuss at this point. A very easy proposition without wind, rain, hail, lightning, and thunder to deal with. Lightning flashed on the East Horn and rocks were buzzing around us in the notch, as Ken, then Mike and then Zac climbed halfway up Drizzlepuss and set up three ropes to belay with. With Mark shouting over the wind to Ken, Mike, and Zac which color rope needed tension or slack, the rest of us began working our way up the ledges. The soggy ropes were heavy and oozed water. Our hands ached from the coldness of the wet rope or rock and the wind. All of us shivered from the wind chill and sudden coldness to the day. Eric shared his wind pants with Ken who had worn shorts to climb in. Paula found a dry haven for her legs, from the cold wet wind, in the interior of Mike's pack. Zac bravely let Paula and Donna warm their cold, numbed fingers on his back and stomach. Finally Mark was belayed up to the belay point and the same process took us back to the summit of Drizzlepuss. Ice axes were retrieved, semi dry hiking boots replaced rock shoes, and warm clothing was retrieved from the packs left on Drizzlepuss. We glissaded down the snowfield and began the scramble back to camp. Fantasies of hot cocoa, hot soup, hot anything dominated everyone's thoughts. Thunder, lightning, and more rain made sure we didn't dry out much as we hiked down. By the time we had all arrived at camp, fantasies of hot dinner, hot showers, and warm beds had taken over.

Everyone except Mark and Donna decided to pound down the mountain, paddle their canoes across Leigh and String Lakes, and fulfill those fantasies. Mark and Donna prepared a leisurely dinner and enjoyed the sunset, before turning in for the night. Apparently, the only mishap that occurred, as everyone else made their way down the mountain, was Mike demonstrating how to wash his pack with all of his gear still in it when he arrived at the canoes.

Sleeping late the following morning, Mark and Donna lazily dried wet gear in the warm sun, took their time packing and then made their way down the steep route to the lake. After loading their gear into the canoe, they looked up at the mountain and the black dike against the blue sky high above. It seemed to taunt them and beckon them to try again.

Teton Crest Trail Trip Report

This year's week long backpacking trip along the Teton Crest Trail was outstanding. Potomac Appalachian Trail Club members Frank Francisco, Eddie Muranski, John Hagarty, John David (JJ) Hagarty, and Gary and Meg Weinberg joined Donna and Mark Whitham on Saturday, September 4, for what turned out to be a 52 mile, eight day trip through the most gorgeous country. Two additional IAC members, Gaylon Lords and Lisa Hanson joined us for the first three days. We started at the top of Rendezvous Mt. (10,300') in 28 degree weather and 4 inches of snow. From then on, it was blue skies every day, with highs in the 60s and lows in the high 20s. Side trips included peak bagging a rocky butte (10,300') on Mt. Meek Divide, summiting Static Peak (11,300'), and an afternoon hike to enjoy the view from Lake Solitude. The scope of the country is dramatic with camping above 1000' deep canyons (Death Canyon Shelf) or in the heart of them (Alaska Basin, Granite Cascade, and Paintbrush Canyons).

Our first nights campsite was high in Granite Canyon. Before dinner, Frank, John, and JJ hiked up to the top of a ridge to enjoy the view. Two moose were spotted grazing on the meadow above the campsite during dinner. After dinner Gaylon 'taught' Meg and Gary how to play Hearts and then was sandbagged by Gary 'shooting the moon' while pretending to not realize what cards he was playing. Scenery such as Marion Lake, Spearhead Peak, and Fox Creek Pass make the time on the trail pass quickly on the way to the next campsite. The Death Canyon Shelf campsite overlooked the depths of Death Canyon. Springs on the shelf were icy cold and gurgled up out of the limestone then sank into sinkholes to plunge down to the canyon below. Fossil mountain, Mt. Bannon, Mt. Jedediah Smith, and Mt. Meek are lined up along the cliff bands above the campsite. Somewhat of a wind kept us on our toes making sure gear didn't take flight.

Gaylon and Lisa exited at Alaska Basin where the rest of us enjoyed a layover day and the assault on Static Peak. One of the men learned that day, that when it is windy and chilly, it is downright impossible to bag a peak if you aren't wearing your skivvies. From the top of Static Peak, there is a wondrous view of the many peaks of the Tetons, including the Grand, the Wind Rivers, including Gannet, Rimrock Lake, and the Jackson Valley. Mark and Donna phoned home to check on Tucker and Gunar and reported a dead horse found laying beside Mirror Lake on the way up. The Basin Lakes and Mirror Lake in Alaska Basin reflected their rock slab shorelines as they sparkled in the sunlight from Buck Mountain Divide. The Wedge is quite dramatic to see at sunset in Alaska Basin.

Hurricane Pass provided a dramatic view of the Tetons, (yes it is possible to see the lower saddle open air latrine on the Grand from there). Then a knee pounding hike past Schoolroom Glacier took us down into South Cascade Canyon, where we camped for the night. North Cascade Canyon, just a couple miles up the canyon, was our next stop. This campsite had a "deck" with a $1000 view. Dinner and breakfast were enjoyed from atop the "deck" above camp. The Grand Teton, Mt. Owen, Teewinott, and the Middle Teton towered above the deeply glaciated valley. With binoculars it was possible to watch climbers on the very snowy looking Owen Spalding route early in the morning. Meg and Gary decided to exit at Cascade Canyon out to the Jenny Lake ferry. They finished out the week sightseeing in Teton and Yellowstone Parks.

Our climb out of North Cascade Canyon and up and over Paintbrush Divide involved a 2,200' vertical ascent, with a corresponding drop into Paintbrush Canyon. Just when you think you are at the top of Paintbrush Divide, you realize that the trail continues on ever upward for another mile to the 10,800' pass. Donna and JJ took great delight in informing Mark and Eddy, on the switchback below them, that what looked like the top of the pass, wasn't the top. On top of Paintbrush Divide a fantastic view of the northern end of the Teton range unfolds. Mt. Moran dominates the view. Unfortunately, the wind was really whipping and it was starting to rain, so raingear and pack covers were donned quickly. Without lingering on the divide, we began plunging down the rock strewn trail. Several snow field and rock slide crossings later the sun was back out and the wind had died down. The campsite below Holly Lake and The Jaw was a welcome sight that night. We enjoyed a view of Leigh Lake and Jackson Lake while dining on our last dinner of the trip. Clouds rolled in and a short sprinkle interrupted Eddy's evening hot toddy and sent us all into our tents for the nite.

The next morning, 6.2 miles and 1-3/4 hours later we arrived at the String Lake trail head, stopping only long enough to talk to Lisa Hansen and Susan Farnsworth who were on a day hike up Paintbrush Canyon. Pizza fantasies and hot showers then a scrumptious dinner at the Alpenhoff Bistro ended our trip.

Along the way we spotted lots of wildlife, including an ancient bull moose, (dubbed Bullwinkle), who grazed 50 yards from the camp in North Cascade Canyon. On the same evening JJ arose in the dark morning hours to respond to a nature call, only to flash his light on a disturbed and bristled porcupine. Whoa! John executed a diving leap back into his tent. On the way to Marion Lake a cow moose and her calf were spotted grazing along the trail by Gary, Donna, and Eddy. During our lunch break at Marion Lake, a curious deer gave John quizzical looks as John stalked it for a close up photo. At night we were often serenaded by the howl of coyotes.

Plans for another IAC/PATC trip next year are already underway with possibilities of the Spanish Peaks, the Beartooths, or the Sawtooths. Logistics, routes, and dates will be worked out over the early winter. John plans to acquire binoculars before his next trip out west since he found that Mark's binoculars were invaluable for scanning the endless landscape of canyons, buttes and peaks.

Farewell to our friends from the east till the next trip...

Highway Clean-up

As brought before and approved the general membership at the September meeting, the IAC will be maintaining a two mile section of State Highway 31 on the way up Pine Creek Pass between mileposts 6 & 8. A two times a year clean up for a two year period is the commitment and is a great way to do some community service with your friends. At the same time, the Idaho Transportation Department will post a sign on the highway that the Idaho Alpine Club is responsible for that section of highway. Let's all show what a great group we are to the community as we do our part in keeping the landscape clean.

Trans Canada Trail

There is a fellow named Roger who interested in connecting with any club members who might be interested in traversing Canada via the Trans Canada Trail? The trail is in the process of being built and is schedule for completion in Sept. of 2000. There are really two trails, east west and north south. The one I'm interested in is the east west one. I believe that one will be done sooner. If you're not familiar with the Trail just look up www.tctrail.ca. There are two people who are going to walk the trail so far, but they would like at least 6 or so, safety in numbers ect. Roger is 53 years of age and his walking partner is 30. Time frame would be 8 to 9 months comfortable and beginning in April of 2000. A great millennium project. If you are interested Roger's email address is minus35@home.com
